Eclectic Magazine. The January number of the Eclectic has already come to hand. Its table of contents presents a large and entertaining variety, the opening article being on the subject of "Woman, her Position, Influence, and Wishes." republished from the National Review, and is an exceedingly able and interesting article. The whole of the selections are made with excellent taste and sound judgment. There is not an unseasonable article in the number. The embellishment of this number is an engraving of SHAKSPEARE and his contemporaries, in which we have portraits of
